Description

Here is overlapping of the project name by the main menu. This happens when the projects are nested and also have long names

What can be done in such cases. How to make the header wider permanently? Is it possible to make it automatically adjustable depending on the length of project names?

Partially fixed #1813 and fixed #1814

History

Will try to play with it...

Seems can be fixed with adding the following CSS rule (overwriting default CSS):

#header {
    min-height: 5.3em;
```

Not sure if I'm going to add this to 0.02 - need to be sure it does not break things... Could you please test?

At least for my site (with custom logo) it does... Can be fixed by (this is mostly a note for me):

#header h1 {
    /* float: left; */
    overflow: hidden;
```

This works! But not completely... Not sure if I can do anything else.
Suggestions are welcome!

I am able to change header's height by adding

    min-height: 5.3em;
```

into

#header {
    padding-left: 10px;
    padding-right: 10px;
    border-bottom-left-radius: 10px;
    border-bottom-right-radius: 10px;
    -moz-border-radius-bottomleft: 10px;
    -moz-border-radius-bottomright: 10px;
    background-color: #374047;
    background-image: url(../images/header-background.png);
    background-repeat: repeat-x;
    color: #8f969d;
    min-height: 6.3em;
}
```

It is 6.3 ok for me. I don't see the effect of

    overflow: hidden;
```

that is added into

#header h1 {
    font-family: Georgia, Arial;
    font-weight: normal;
    color: #fff;
    overflow: hidden;
}
```

The tabs are in front of the project name (I made it ever longer to see what would happen.)

#6 - 26 Sep 2011 14:15 - Andriy Lesyuk

- Status changed from In Progress to Won't Fix

- % Done changed from 70 to 100

I believe there is not much what I can do to fix this (except what I have done)... I also believe the issue has effect on other themes (including the default one).

So going to close this issue...   3/3
